

XCEL POWER ACHIEVE ISO14001:2004 CERTIFICATION

Xcel Power Systems have achieved successful accreditation to ISO14001:2004.

Certification was confirmed on 20th June 2008 following the implementation of a revised Environmental Management System at the Ashford, UK manufacturing facility.

The project has been successfully managed by Richard Weller, Managing Director and Alan Stone, Quality Manager at Xcel Power Systems.

Commenting on the successful completion of the transition, Richard Weller said "We take our responsibilities for maintaining and improving the environment with the utmost degree of seriousness and will implement all necessary steps to maintain and improve upon our current position in respect of this issue. Many of our customers see this certification as a critical step in the cementation of our relationships with them and we are delighted to achieve certification at the first attempt".
